

Synonymy substitution evaluation

Context

A polysemous word is a word that has multiple meanings. For example, the word light has the following two meanings (among others):

- 1) That which makes things visible.
- 2) Point of view.

For each of these senses we can find an associated synonym:

- 1) brightness
- 2) manner

Let us consider the following example of the word light illustrating the sense number 2 (point of view):

S1) After he recounted the difficulties he had faced in life, I looked at him in a completely different light.

If we replace the word light in this sentence by its synonyms one by one, we obtain two new sentences:

S2) After he recounted the difficulties he had faced in life, I looked at him in a completely different brightness.

S3) After he recounted the difficulties he had faced in life, I looked at him in a completely different manner.

We observe that the substitution resulted in an acceptable sentence (S3) when the sense of the synonym matched the context. When it did not, the resulting sentence (S2) was less well-formed.

Task

The table below consists of 5 columns: the item number, a target word, an example sentence containing the target word, the decision and a judgement on the quality of the item.

Each of the items consists of three sentences:

- The first sentence is an attested example of the target word (enclosed in square brackets)
- The second and third are sentences where the target word was substituted in the example by two of its synonyms, one by one

One of the substitutions is with a synonym that matches the sense of the context.

For each of the below items, which of the second or third sentences best expresses the sense of the first sentence?

Decision column: Please respond with 2 for the second sentence or 3 for the third (not both). In case the item is ambiguous (both 2 and 3 seem plausible), please still choose an answer and only one (the most probable) and fill in the 'Weird' column.

Weird column: Please respond with 1 only if, for any reason, you had a tough time choosing an answer (the sentences were ambiguous, badly formed etc.)

Thank you!

Example:

Item	Target	Example sentences	2 or 3	Weird
0	light	After he recounted the difficulties he had faced in life, I looked at him in a completely different [light].	3
0	brightness	After he recounted the difficulties he had faced in life, I looked at him in a completely different [brightness].
0	manner	After he recounted the difficulties he had faced in life, I looked at him in a completely different [manner].

Test

Decision column: Please respond with 2 for the second sentence or 3 for the third (not both). In case the item is ambiguous (both 2 and 3 seem plausible), please still choose an answer and only one (the most probable) and fill in the 'Weird' column.

Weird column: Please respond with 1 only if, for any reason, you had a tough time choosing an answer (the sentences were ambiguous, badly formed etc.)

Thank you!
